During a wellness visit your pediatrician will address your child's overall well-being which often includes things that are unrelated to sports, such as:

- Evaluation of your child's physical and developmental growth;
- Immunizations (according to vaccination schedule);
- Assessment of existing medical conditions;
- School forms, sports and college physicals;
- Address any questions or concerns you may have specific to your child

The best part is, your pediatrician can incorporate a sports physical and wellness exam into one visit.

Even if your child doesn't play sports, they still need a wellness exam every year.
